

A Listing of Approved and Denied University-Based Administrator Training Programs

The following chart depicts those colleges and universities whose departments of educational administration have gone through the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) accreditation process and have gained "National Recognition" by the Educational Leadership Constituent Council (ELCC) for one or more of their administrator training programs.

The National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) is an accrediting agency established to help increase the quality of departments, schools, and colleges of education. NCATE accreditation is a voluntary peer review process of the professional education units responsible for the preparation of teachers and other professional school personnel based on national standards developed by professors and practitioners. Accredited institutions are reviewed on a five-year cycle.

The Educational Leadership Constituent Council (ELCC) is an affiliation of three administrator groups (ASCD, NAESP and NASSP). It is authorized by NCATE to review preparation programs for educational administrators using standards developed by the National Policy Board for Educational Administration (NPBEA). The ELCC conducts rigorous peer reviews of departments of educational administration on behalf of NCATE and determines which programs are deserving of "National Recognition."

Out of an estimated 500 universities and colleges that offer programs in educational administration, 315 of these choose accreditation through NCATE. Of these, 184 institutions have gone through the ELCC program review process since 1996. Of these, 137 institutions have received national recognition for one or more of their educational administration programs.

The second chart depicts colleges and universities whose departments of educational administration have gone through the NCATE accreditation process and have been denied program recognition. To make the list of "denied programs," a department of educational administration had to have (1) one or more of its programs denied by the ELCC, (2) ignored a request by the ELCC for another submission and review, and (3) accepted NCATE accreditation of the department's host institution without the department itself having satisfied the requirements for its own national recognition.
